WHOOPIING COUGH.

A woman who has had experience with this disease, tells how to prevent any dangerous consequence from it. She says: Our three children took whooping cough last summer, our baby boy being only three months old, and owing to our giving them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, they lost none of their plumpness and came out in much better health than other children whose parents did not use this remedy. Our oldest little girl would call lustily for cough syrup between whoops. —JESSIE PINKNEY HALL, Springfield, Ala. This remedy is for sale by Craig & Hocker, Druggists.

Hon. F. P. Combest on His Trip South.

MCKINNEY, TEX., April 27.—The I. J. editor and some of his readers will be surprised to hear of me attending the reunion of the old Confederates at Dallas. I have been traveling around in the Lone Star State for 10 days and visited various towns and have seen legions of old Kentuckians; among them John Goode, now in the lively business, and Thos. Jasper, a "bloated banker" at Plano. Goode is doing well and Jasper is making lots of money in the banking business. $50,000 capital and $30,000 surplus and 10 per cent. dividend and paid a loss of $19,000 that the bank was robbed of, in 15 years, is certainly a bonanza.

At McKinney, John Page, formerly county attorney of Casey, has gotten rich in the real estate business and practicing law. R. N. Adams, superintendent of the Fox Grocery Co., and brother of our Charley and Beecher Adams and brother-in-law of J. P. Goode, of Hustonville, has a fine trade and is located right at the depot. There are quite a number of Kentucky people in McKinney, most of them from Adair county, the Dehoneys, Massies, etc.

At Valdosta there is another colony of Kentuckians, with J. W. Combest the king bee. He has about 3,000 acres of black waxen land worth $50 per acre and a big store and cotton gin and a ranch of jacks and jennets that he purchased of J. K. Baughman and others two years ago. Most of this colony is made up of Russell and Pulaski county people. I will not give a list of them now. Well, at Anna Texas, there is a colony of Caseyites among them, C. C. Riggins and boys, Z. T. Shaw, and boys, Aaron Terrill and Ben Combest, Jas. Shaw, Ike Shaw, Jo Sams, Charles Cravens, Austin Smith, Henry Cudiff, Heck Arnold and lots of others. They are all well satisfied and have fine prospects this season.

Corn looks fine—from ankle to knee high. Wheat and oats look well. Wheat is heading in fine shape. Some have commenced chopping cotton, which is the big crop here. Everything looks flourishing and the weather warm and fine.

I had forgotten to mention my brother, Dr. D. C. Combest, at Prosper, on the Frisco railroad, between Sherman and Fort Worth, a new town and railroad. He is pleased with his new town, which is three months old and growing rapidly and in as fine a valley of land as there is in Texas. He owns about 500 acres of the black wax.

We started from Junction City on the Q. & C. through the tunnels over the trestles, along the C. S. to Chattanooga; thence to New Orleans over the Alabama, Great Southern, Crossed Lake Ponchartrain, 22 miles, just before reaching N. O. Crossed the Mississippi on boat, thence through the rice fields of Louisiana to Beaumont, Texas, where the oil fields rival James Frye's Knox county wells, and W. M. Myers, Dr. Barker and Gill Cowan's Wayne county pushers. I think the Casey Oil Company might do well to bore one of their prospective wells at Beaumont, as they would be as likely to find oil here as in Casey.

The Confederate reunion was a success so far as the crowd was concerned. It seemed that all roads led to Dallas, which is a fine city and in a beautiful country. The city was packed with people from all quarters, like sardines in a box, but there was lots to eat on every corner and liquid refreshments as plentiful. There were about 1,000 tents stretched on the fair grounds and the old boys in gray enjoyed themselves and thought they could whip the rest of the world. One old general remarked that he would not have surrendered till yet had he known there were so many of them left.

F. P. COMBEST.

Almost a Tragedy.

Early this morning a great crowd gathered at the L. & N. depot. Their horrified gaze was fixed on what seemed to be the body of a well-dressed colored man suspended in mid-air across the wires of the Stanford Telephone Company. Everybody was offering suggestions, but fear was uppermost in the hearts of the spectators, not one having the requisite nerve to relieve the unfortunate on the deadly wires. Happily Mr. Jones arrived on the scene, and he soon had some of the attaches of the railroad ascend the poles and remove the supposed corpse to terra firma. Blanched faces soon assumed their natural aspect when it was discovered that the cause of the commotion was a dummy used in front of one of the leading clothing stores. On the breast of the coat was a placard stating that Sells & Down's Big Show would be in Stanford, Monday, May 12.

The Amalgamated Association determined to increase its defense fund from $25,000 to $100,000, and to be prepared for a year's strike, if one should again occur.

As will be seen by the above the threshers were able to keep on with their work without losing a single day's time. You should keep a bottle of this remedy in your home. Our Prospects.

Lincoln county lies in the central part of the State of Kentucky and is on a line between Bath, Martin, Floyd and Knott counties on the Northeast, and Wayne, Barren and Allen on the Southwest. Before the war, Lincoln county had attracted attention as an oil territory and today this county is coming to the front as one of the promising oil fields of the State. The county is situated at the foot-hills of the Cumberland range of mountains where the limestone and the sandstone blend. Stanford is the county seat of the county, and Sheriff M. S. Baughman's farm is 1½ miles from this place. It is proper to add that this is the only well that has ever been drilled north of the Green and Kentucky river divide in Lincoln county. Hell has at last been located. Bore for oil near Gallatin, Tenn., at the depth of 1,010 feet struck a large volume of sulphur water, which was believed at the time to be only an indication of the near proximity of oil. It has since been found that the drill penetrated a vast underground sea of unfathomable depth, the water rising in one night 500 feet, and is now within a few feet of the mouth of the well. A roaring sound is continuously heard, coming from the unknown depths, and throngs of people are visiting the well. The water is sulphurous and but for the fact that it is ice cold the natives would begin to flee the wrath to come. —Lexington Democrat. Gallatin is 150 miles south of Danville.

and traditions of this county warrant the belief that oil could be found in paying quantities here, local capital has been too timid to risk the venture and it remained for the Central Oil, Gas & Mining Co. of Lexington, Ky., to bring the possibilities of the field prominently before the people. On the 7th day of April, 1902, this company brought in at a depth of 620 feet a well producing oil at an estimated gravity of 32 degrees and capacity estimated from 15 barrels to 50 barrels daily, produced from a well-defined oil sand 12 feet thick, with 8 feet pay streak, conservatively estimated. In this well oil is now standing 370 feet, by actual measurement. The above are facts. We are not undertaking a "boosting" business. In proof of this we produce the following analysis from the chemist of State College, Lexington:

Specific gravity 32 degrees B. Distillate below 300 F. 18 per cent. (gasoline); distillate between 300 and 572 F. 28.5 per cent. (burning oil); distillate above 572 F. 42.5 per cent. (heavy paraffin oil, lubricating oil); solid residue, 10; total, 99 per cent.

The Company has the property and while the larger investors will receive the larger returns, every stockholder will fare alike. The acreage in Lincoln county leased by this Company amounts to 3,000 acres, and the leases are of good life; fully a third of the leases are within a radius of one-half mile of the well. In addition, these leases are, in the main, adjacent and contiguous to the M. S. Baughman farm, on which the well is located. Of these leases a tract of 142½ acres is within 1,052 feet of the well. With an oil well so close, of admitted quality and quantity produced from an oil sand 12 feet thick, the Company confidently asserts that it may reasonably claim to be offering something tangible to the investor, that the possibilities of the company are great and commend themselves to the reader.

The Company's first location will not be further than one mile from the L. & N. railroad, to which the oil, by reason of the lay of the land, will gravitate. The railroad runs immediately through part of the Company's holdings.
